Show future employers or graduate schools that you are intellectually curious, take initiative, and can adapt to different settings. Engage in research abroad!

- Research abroad takes many forms, from field research in a cloud forest, to assessing child health programs in a small village, to lab experiments with leading researchers, to literature searches of original documents for a senior thesis.
- Consider your preference: to engage in Directed Research (you join an individual or team on a pre-existing research initiative) or Independent Study (you design your own).
- In addition to research-related programs highlighted in this flyer, you may ask your faculty if they have research connections abroad that you can tap.
